

Brighton chose Nash as Achiever of the Year for his many accomplishments since his enrollment in the program. Nash has gone from a little boy who could not walk, speak well, or socialize with other children to a little boy who now runs down the hall, speaks in two to three word sentences, and loves to socialize with his classmates. His Early Childhood Intervention Specialist, Rebecca, said that one of his first words was "basketball" as opposed to simple words like cat or dog. She can also remember him trying to shoot baskets before he could even stand.
